It wasn't an eclipse. Not during a full moon. Never during a scientific align of the planets. But on my birthday. April 15. The Blue Moon would appear every year towering over my house. That's why I was always was on the roof, watching the sun set and the moon appear, and the moon set and sun appear. I never missed a second.

And now, I have a chance to not only see it, but touch it. I'm 28, and have been training for this for ten years. I'm going to go onto the moon.
